

THE INTERIOR JOURNAL.

FRIDAY, : : MARCH 22, 1872.

PREMIUMS.

By way of inducing our friends in Lincoln and adjoining counties to subscribe for our paper, after this date, we make the following liberal offer: To each subscriber who desires it, and will pay so at the time of subscribing and paying the money ($2), we will give 15 extra fine plants of the Kirtland Raspberry—which is a large, early red variety, and perfectly delicious. These plants alone are fully worth the price of our paper; but we have made such arrangements with nurserymen as to justify us in making this offer. Our object is to circulate our Journal all over interior Kentucky; and no effort shall be spared to accomplish it. The plants can be had by ordering them from our office.

LABOR MEETING.

In New York city the other day, a few laborers met to get into their heads to call a meeting of the "unemployed" thousands of that strange city, including men, women and children. To create as much excitement as possible and thereby make as much of a crowd as they could, these disaffected people had several covered wagons driven through the principal streets, upon which were emblazoned mottoes suggestive of the object of their meeting. On the day set apart for the assembling of this "grand convention," a band of music was present, stand fixed up, and the usual number of "orators" ready to do the spouting. A preamble and resolutions were read for the edification of the multitude, which, in themselves, were modest enough—barring a spirit of complaint at what seems to be inevitable fate. Here were gathered together a motley crew—some, perhaps, of those who had seen "better days," others who expect to eke out a subsistence by hook and by crook (principally the former) while a few, perhaps, were real laborers from a want of spirit to defend themselves from the cold reception of this selfish world.

This meeting of the "unemployed" afforded an ample text for sermonizing, far better than many of our divines find in the political booth of the day, or that equally fruitful source—suicides and embezzlements. After the multitude had assembled, they were regaled by several "orators" (O!) of the decidedly vulgar type. Oaths and imprecations interlarded their discourses; calling down vengeance upon the "rich and the aristocratic." In the minds of such a throng, riches are invariably associated with aristocracy. They seem to think and act that a man who is able to live without manual labor, is a "non-producer," and hence an aristocrat. They seem to have no conception of the fact that away back in the years gone by, these same men who now live at their ease, in a comfortable home, were, many of them, men who began life as poor and obscure as they are now, but who, by dint of industry and economy, accumulated and saved their earnings, instead of squandering and wasting them in beer gardens and liquor saloons. Many of those who assembled in that meeting, might have been men of influence to-day, and been living in ease and comfort, had they husbanded their earnings and lived lives of sobriety and honesty. The remedy for the evil complained of by these men, does not lie altogether in the direction they point out. Far from it. We venture to say that there is not, in the great city of New York, many persons who would long remain out of employment, if they would soberly and industriously attend to the work placed before them.

On the whole, this meeting is not without its lesson. It shows us one view of the world which we never had clearly defined before. In a republic like ours, men learn from the cradle, that all of them are equal. It is among the first lessons of their lives. But they do not learn that lesson correctly. Their ideas of "equality" are that all men should have an equal share of this world's goods, whether they labor for it or not. If they could have their way, a system of agrarianism would be set on foot, and the huge, untenanted, hereditaments of all of it would be parcelled out to all, share and share alike. Yet, if this were done, a single decade would not pass before the same original disparity in amount would be found to exist. But we find this subject growing upon our minds, and must reserve further comment for a more convenient season.

To our BUSINESS MEN.—You can't catch on in a week to take you a whole year, and you can't advertise on that plan either. Injudicious advertising is like fishing where there is no fish. You need your lines to fall in the right place. If you can arouse curiosity by an advertisement, it's a great point gained. The fair sex don't hold all the curiosity in the world. A constant dropping will wear away a rock. Keep dropping your advertisements on the public through the medium of a live local newspaper, and increased sales and lively times at your place of business will be the result. Don't be afraid to use printer's ink.

The Senate of Kentucky has passed a bill providing for the establishment of an asylum for the treatment of insane, but having stricken out the provision making an appropriation of money for the purpose.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

We have received the first number of the INTERIOR JOURNAL, the new paper just started at Stanford. We find it a well printed sheet, full of interesting matter, and bearing the marks of skillful editorial labor. We hope our friends may meet with the encouragement they deserve, in their new enterprise.—Kentucky Advertiser.

THE INTERIOR JOURNAL.

This is the title of a 32 column Democratic newspaper just started at Stanford, under the proprietorship of Messrs. Hilton and Campbell of that place. It is well gotten up, neatly printed, is filled with local news, and is placed at two dollars a year. We trust that the people of Lincoln may appreciate the difficulties attending the starting of a new paper, and from the failures that have preceded this last attempt to furnish them a live paper, will give the publishers a hearty and liberal support. The cause sought to be upheld deserves such support, and the citizens of Stanford, ought to see to it themselves that this endeavor shall be entirely successful.—Richmond Register.

THE INTERIOR JOURNAL.

The first number of this new Kentucky Journal, dated March 8, of which we have seen so much in our exchanges far and near, by some mischance or over sight, did not reach us until yesterday. It is published by Messrs. Hilton and Campbell, proprietors, who will be aided in their editorial duties by H. T. Harris. The Journal has all the outside as well as inside appearance of a first class interior or country weekly, being filled, in each distinctly marked department, mostly of original articles of sensible comment on the news and current topics of the day, together with a full page of local matter. In their opening article the proprietors say: "Our highest aim is to make this journal an epitome of local news." Discarding extreme partisanship, they nevertheless "hoist the Democratic flag, believing that the principles of the Democratic party are wise and just." We tender them a cordial welcome to our exchange list, and our best wishes for the success of an enterprise so auspiciously begun.—Yemassee.

NEW PAPERS.

During the past week we have received and added to our exchange list the following candidates for public favor: The Interior Journal, published weekly at Stanford, Lincoln County, Ky., by Hilton and Campbell. The Journal is a very neat-looking eight column folio paper, of the Bourbon, or Hunter, Democratic persuasion. A good newspaper has long been a want of Stanford, and we hope that the Interior Journal will be encouraged and patronized by the citizens of Central Kentucky.—Louisville Commercial.

The first number of the Interior Journal is on our table. It is a new Democratic paper published at Stanford, Ky., by Hilton and Campbell, at $2 a year in advance. We welcome these gentlemen to the editorial ranks, and wish them success in their laudable ambition to promote the interests of the community in which they live, and their own interest at the same time. There is much to be done in Kentucky to bring the noble old State to the front in work of material progress, and by no means can it so well be accomplished as by advocacy of a liberal, enlightened policy on the part of the press.—Kentucky People.

The Interior Journal is the name of a large and handsomely-printed weekly newspaper just started at Stanford, Ky., by Messrs. Hilton and Campbell. The services of H. T. Harris, Esq., a lawyer and a gentleman of fine abilities and culture, have been secured in the editorial department. The Journal proposes to give its chief attention to the news of local interest, its conductors very sensibly taking the position that matter of that kind leads to county papers their chief attraction. In policies it is Democratic.—Courier Journal.

"YOU TICKLE ME AND I WILL TICKLE YOU."

We have received the first number of the "Interior Journal," a new paper just started at Stanford, Lincoln County, in this State. Under the head of a "good paper," the Journal says:

"The Paris Tree. Kentucky is among the best conducted papers that come to our office. Like the Kentucky Advocate of Danville, it bears the impress of skillful management. Success to both."

The Journal is a large paper, published by Hilton and Campbell, H. T. Harris associate editor. It is a fine looking paper such as Lincoln county ought to take a pride in sustaining.—True Kentucky.

THE INTERIOR JOURNAL.

The first number of this new candidate for public favor, published at Stanford Ky., by Messrs. Hilton and Campbell, appeared on Friday last, the 8th inst. It is a handsome sheet of thirty-two columns, well filled with local and general news, and other interesting matter, and furnished to subscribers at $2 a year. H. T. Harris, Esq., will assist in the editorial department. A singular fatality has attended former efforts to establish a paper at Stanford, from which we hope this enterprise will be exempt.—Lebanon Standard.

An advertiser whose subscribers were remiss in payment, lately published the following announcement in his paper: To save our readers the trouble of sending their subscription by post, and to relieve two unfortunate, we will send to each of our debtors in the course of a few days, two collectors, one of whom has hardly recovered from the small pox and the other of whom has just taken the itch. The delinquent did not wait to be called on but paid their dues promptly.
